- Pienso en colegas amigas indigenas en Guatemala con quienes compartir estas oportunidades
- i feel called to be more bold and creative
- ¿Con quién puedo asociarme para apoyar a comunidades afectadas por la minería? Ahora
- no los conozco, pero seguro que puedo encontrar a esas personas.
Tejer bienestar
- How do systems change organisations attract funding where impact and outcomes take time to show and might not be immediately visible - who work on fieldbuilding, activating change actors, etc.
- Feeling very inspired by the examples shared. Definitively so much transformative potential! thinking how can this model be replicated to serve other causes. However, mindful that we are still centering this to philanthropy and corporate capital.

- I'm learning about entirely new industries and possibilities, which gives me hope.
- Hay dinero para movimientos sociales en diversos lugares, pienso en como conectar con los fondos de mujeres que dan fondos para organizarse, agendas politicas...y siempre pensamos en la necesidad de dinero para proyectos productivos, para ser sostenibles. Me gustsa priorizar movimientos sociales e indigenas, y agroecologia

- In a relational world with separability, what are the values that will matter the most? Dignity? Respect? Worth? How can we get people to realise that these values will matter if humanity wants to survive and thrive?
- Maybe I can reach out to these wonderful people and ask if they see any opportunity for mining- affected communities
- How can we bring these ideas more to the mainstream? There are so many inspiring initiatives across the just finance and regenerative futures movement, yet often it feels like we are operating in an echochamber. It's always inspiring to attend sessions like these but when I speak to others who do not work in these spaces they have no idea how much is happening.

- Collaboration and co-creation is a huge factor in third horizon work
- I would love to learn how to open more doors to collaborate with these inspiring collaborative funds, if one is not already IN the active network, what a place to start?

- Que debemos dejar de pensar en el dinero como un recurso escaso y mejor activar modelos que permiten redirigirlo
- Finding it hard to figure out how to apply this to my own organization's situation
- philanthropies braiding investments AND grantmaking commitments for greater impact - yes! how do we compel all philanthropic foundations to do that!? and expand further beyond these known wealth holders to others?

- Co-creacion a nivel financiero
- Really appreciated Jennifer naming the mechanics of how she managed to lead this effort while being a learner herself. I'm so eager to invite my org to move in this direction but I think this lack of expertise is my biggest worry right now

- You can actually convince an investor that ROI can be something else than money and that accumulation is not a good final goal! Wow.

- Inspiracion!
- Feeling so hopeful to know that these innovative funding systems are emerging. Also feeling like I need to find the time to learn, learn, learn, and begin to engage with these systems. Thank you for inspiring hope!
- It is refreshing to hear about people really trying and succeeding in helping others
- Hay dinero ahi afuera para que las comunidades que sostienen la vida y cuidan territorios pueda seguir con ese trabajo con dignidad
- It is possible to create a movement of solidarity with investors and similar who are interested in social change rather than only returns of capital.
- Co-creation and partnerships

- are key!
- This is so much information, its hard to process when you are just sitting here trying to survive, but i like the challenge
- So should we be more inspired by traditional financing models just putting them to use for civil society?
- Mostly hopeful and excited about the creativity of the movements.
- There is money out there for people sustianing life
